The Public Servants Association (PSA) welcomes the long-overdue opening of the Nursing School, Dental Unit, and Forensic Facility at Mokopane Hospital as a critical investment in healthcare education and service delivery in Limpopo.

The PSA emphasises the urgent need for the Department of Health to ensure that more nurses are trained and fully equipped to render quality health services in the public sector. Following the mass retirement of public servants, the establishment of the Nursing School will play a vital role in producing young, energetic, and professional nurses who can strengthen the healthcare system and meet the growing demands of communities.

The PSA also applauds the appointment of Dental Technologists, whose expertise will significantly enhance the delivery of oral-health services. Their inclusion will ensure that the new Dental Unit operates at the highest professional standards, advancing quality oral care for patients across the Province. The Forensic facilities will further advance the provision of quality forensic services, complementing several other specialised healthcare services across Limpopo. These additions will improve patient care and enhance the overall capacity of Mokopane Hospital as a center of excellence.

The PSA calls on the Department of Health to expedite the improvement of healthcare infrastructure to ensure that facilities are suitable for delivering decent, dignified, and effective health services to the public.
