CGS Collective Bargaining: Chief Negotiator

The PSA has made changes in as far as matters of interests are concerned within the Institution. The rationale behind this is to improve service delivery to promote the interests of its members.

The PSA urges members to assist in improving membership to collectively protect your interest, rather than allowing the employer to dictate all your terms and conditions of employment. The PSA currently needs a negligible number of members to attain its collective bargaining rights. To have your rights and interests be adequately protected existing members are urged to recruit. Such concerted efforts will ensure that you have a reliable agent in ensuring your job security.
