Victory for PSA members

Two members were charged with misconduct relating to overtime fraud and corruption in a hospital in the Westrand area. Four other employees were charged with similar charges but represented by other trade unions. Owing to robust engagement by the PSA official during the disciplinary hearing, two of the employees who were represented by other unions changed their membership and representation to that of the PSA. During cross examination, the main witness faced difficult questions and was proven to be the one who orchestrated the charges. The PSA official applied for absolution on the instance. The Chairperson gave the employer an opportunity to reconsider withdrawing the charges. The employer returned with a mandate from the Hospital CEO to withdraw the charges against all the PSA members.
